* It was a tradition of Camelot that each Squire class was expected to throw their Squiremaster into the Lake on Campus (thus the verb “to Lake.”) The water in this lake was so dirty and grimy that no clothing worn into it would ever be fit to wear again. The Lakee would usually undress to their underwear prior to obtaining the benefit of their error in being captured. One cold and snowy afternoon, Squiremaster Bernard was detained by his squire class. While being transported as the squires discussed his fate, he seized an opportunity which presented itself to escape. Even though in his underwear on the far side of campus, he bolted from the squire’s care, and raced to the safety of the dorm – to the amusement of many who were in the process of going to and from their classes. The legend of the Naked Runner was born.
